

To whom it may concern,

I am using Dlink videophone to make a phone call via Video Relay Service.

I have been hearing a lot of comments and want to clarify from you, FCC. It is my understanding that Sorenson produces the Dlink videophones and will not allow any VRS providers to write their own firmware for hearing impaired people. Is there a way for FCC to give VRS providers rights to write their own firmware?

Please advice.

Thanks,
Dale R. Fine